

THE WASHINGTON POST

2.15	6 att. 13
a final of the
DATE	PAGE

State Keeps Viet Study Secret

By Murrey Marder Washington Post Staff Writer

The Senate Foreign Rela-

In a letter to the committee, the State Department claimed tention on a 1961 recommenda- on both sides of the bargain-luctance to negotiate. that the committee's intended staff reports, based on four lor, then President Kennedy's military adviser, to send a few 47-volume Pentagon Papers, "could harm" present diplomatic efforts in the Inde report clearly suggests its con- press accounts last summer. tents: "Negotiations, 1964-1968: Troops Not Sent The Half-Hearted Search for Peace in Vietnam."

negotiators in Paris.

The committee, headed by Refusal Sen. J. William Fulbright (D-Sen. J. William Fulbright (D. Ark.), is releasing today the first of a series of its staff more sensitive report on negotiations. This non-sensitive report, entitled "Vietnam Commit of State for congressional relaments, 1961," by staff researcher Ann L. Hollick, consists of 12 pages plus 26 pages of the staff's more sensitive report on negotiations. Abshire, Assistant Secretary entitled "Vietnam Committee staff's more sensitive report on negotiations was expressed in a letter dated March 9 by David M. Abshire, Assistant Secretary entitled "Vietnam Committee" staff's more sensitive report on negotiations. Abshire, Assistant Secretary entitled "Vietnam Committee" staff's more sensitive report on negotiations. Abshire, Assistant Secretary entitled "Vietnam Committee" staff's more sensitive report on negotiations was expressed in a letter dated March 9 by David M. Abshire, Assistant Secretary entitled "Vietnam Committee" staff's more sensitive report on negotiations was expressed in a letter dated March 9 by David M. Abshire, Assistant Secretary entitled "Vietnam Committee" staff's more sensitive report on negotiations was expressed in a letter dated March 9 by David M. Abshire, Assistant Secretary entitled "Vietnam Committee" staff's more sensitive report on negotiations was expressed in a letter dated March 9 by David M. Abshire, Assistant Secretary entitled "Vietnam Committee" staff's more sensitive report on negotiations was expressed in a letter dated March 9 by David M. Abshire, Assistant Secretary entitled "Vietnam Committee" staff's more sensitive report on negotiations was expressed in a letter dated March 9 by David M. Abshire, Assistant Secretary entitled "Vietnam Committee" staff's more sensitive report of the properties of the sensitive report of the properties of the prop

ments underscores the "unprecedented ... extent to which the Executive Branch misled both Congress and the public" in "policies and decisions of the first year of the Kennedy administration, which significantly degrand the Kennedy administration, violation of confidentiality in which significantly deepened the U.S. military involvement which the diplomatic process cannot further with the victory with victory with the victory with the victory with the victory with victory with the victory with the victory with the victory with victory with the victory with the victory with the victory with victory with the victory with the victory with the victory with victory with the victory with vic in the Vietnam war.

First Broached by U.S.

This staff study emphasizes that "It was United States officials who first broached the subject of a bilateral treaty (with South Vietnam) and United States officials who pressed for a direct military involvement in Vietnam.

"Moreover, such disclosure clude future use of these and other channels in our continuing efforts to deal with the issues of the Indochina conflict including that of our prisoners of war."

"Although news of the ad- Abshire, in a posteript, ex- ing, American and South Viet-ministration's consideration of pressed regret "that we cannot Vietnamese and Vietnames ministration's consideration of pressed regret transfer recombat troops did reach the concur with your request" return the other. Published portions mental discussions regarding a bilateral treaty" diplomatic efforts in the Indo-china conflict.

Dieterm "under the guise of performing flood relief work." The title of the suppressed That was first disclosed in

The treaty never material Committee staff members are continuing negotiations with the State Department to seek partial clearance of the report. One argument they are using against the blanket refusal ef clearance is that President Nixon on Jan. 25 unilaterally declassified information on a dozen secret meetings between adviser Henry A. Kissinger and North Vietnameses negotiators in Paris. lion men.

Refusal to declassify the committee staff's ments, 1901, by stall restal of er Ann L. Hollick, consists of 12 pages plus 26 pages of documents previously available publicly. Even so, there are several security deletions because the text used was the version published by the Government Printing Office, although the deleted material, on intelligence operations, was printed in newspapers last summer.

Sen. Fulbright said the published report on 1961 commitments underscores the ments underscores the ments of the seven that the substance of these volumes should remain classified." State's letter continued: the fied." State's letter continued:

"To disclose these secret channels and official commu-nications relating to them would constitute a unilateral cannot function effectively.

Potentially Harmful

tions Committee has met a public by means of leaks to flat refusal from the Nixon administration for security clear ance of an analysis of Vietnam aware of the intergovern.

The reference in the sup- ceed when the allied military cannot be sup- c mental discussions regarding a plateral treaty."

The reference in the suppressed report to "half-hearted search for peace" is understood to refer to efforts also deals with Communist re-

State Keeps Viet Study Secret

By Murrey Marder Washington Post Staff Writer

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has met a flat refusal from the Nixon administration for security clearance of an analysis of Vietnam negotiations between 1964 and

In a letter to the committee, the State Department claimed that the committee's intended staff reports, based on four never-published volumes of the 47-volume Pentagon Papers, "could harm" present diplomatic efforts in the Indochina conflict.

The title of the suppressed report clearly suggests its contents: "Negotiations, 1964-1968; The Half-Hearted Search for Peace in Vietnam."

Committee staff members are continuing negotiations with the State Department to seek partial clearance of the report. One argument they are using against the blanket refusal of clearance is that President Nixon on Jan. 25 unilaterally declassified information on a dozen secret meetings between adviser Henry A. Kissinger and North Vietnamese negotiators in Paris.

The committee, headed by Ark.), is releasing today the first of a series of its staff analyses of the Pentagon Papers. This non-sensitive report, entitled "Vietnam Commit-12 pages plus 26 pages of docu- lion men. ments previously available publicly. Even so, there are Fulbright committee staff's several security deletions because the text used was the version published by the Government Printing Office, al- Abshire, Assistant Secretary though the deleted material, of State for congressional relaon intelligence operations, tions, to Fulbright. was printed in newspapers last summer.

lished report on 1961 commitunderscores the which the Executive Branch misled both Congress and the public" in "policies and decisions of the first year of the Kennedy administration, which significantly deepened the U.S. military involvement in the Vietnam war." Approve the total and the said Fulbright stated in a Feb.

17 letter, "partial information relating to some of these secret (negotiating) channels" that "appeared in public media..." But, said, Abshire, "it is the department's view in the Vietnam war." Approve the total and the said Fulbright stated in a Feb.

18 letter, "partial information relating to some of these secret (negotiating) channels" that "appeared in public media..." But, said, Abshire, "it is the department's view in the Vietnam war." Approve the total and the said Fulbright stated in a Feb.

19 letter, "partial information relating to some of these secret (negotiating) channels" that "appeared in public media..." But, said, Abshire, "it is the department's view in the Vietnam war." Approve the total and the said Fulbright stated in a Feb.

10 letter, "partial information relating to some of these secret (negotiating) channels" that "appeared in public media..." But, said, Abshire, "it is the department's view in the Vietnam war." Approve the full relating to some of these secret (negotiating) channels" that "appeared in public media..." But, said, Abshire, "it is the department's view in the vietnam war." Approve the full relating to some of these secret (negotiating) channels" that "appeared in public media..." But, said, Abshire, "it is the department's view in the vietnam war." Approve the vietnam war." Approve the vietnam war." But, said, Abshire, "it is the department's view in the vietnam war." But, said, Abshire, "it is the department's view in the vietnam war." But, said, Abshire, "it is the department of the vietnam war." But, said, Abshire, "it is the department of the vietnam war." But, said, Abshire, "it is the department of the vietnam war." But, said, Abshire, "it is the department of the vietnam war." But, said, A

First Broached by U.S.

This staff study emphasizes that "It was United States officials who first broached the subject of a bilateral treaty (with South Vietnam) and United States officials who pressed for a direct military involvement in Vietnam.

"Although news of the administration's consideration of combat troops did reach the public by means of leaks to the press, neither Congress not the public was made aware of the intergovernmental discussions regarding a bilateral treaty."

The report also focuses attention on a 1961 recommendation by Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, then President Kennedy's military adviser, to send a 6,000 to 8,000-man U.S. military task force into South. Vietnam "under the guise of performing flood relief work." That was first disclosed in press accounts last summer.

Troops Not Sent

The treaty never materialized, nor did the Kennedy administration send combat troops, which Taylor recommended. "Had one or both of Sen. J. William Fulbright (D. these measures been carried out at that time," the report notes in retrospect," a greatly increased national commitment to Vietnam would have resulted" much earlier. In the ments, 1961," by staff research. Johnson administration, U.S. er Ann L. Hollick, consists of troops reached over a half-mil-

> Refusal to declassify the more sensitive report on negotiations was expressed in a letter dated March 9 by David M.

Abshire noted that the in-Sen. Fulbright said the pubtiations, 1964-1968: The Halftended staff report on "Nego-Hearted Search for Peace in "unprecedented . . . extent to said Fulbright stated in a Feb. Vietnam," did contain, as he volumes should remain classified." State's letter continued:

"To disclose these secret channels and official communications relating to them would constitute a unilateral violation of confidentiality in diplomatic intercourse without which the diplomatic process cannot function effectively.

Potentially Harmful

"Moreover, such disclosure could harm and possibly preclude future use of these and other channels in our continuing efforts to deal with the issues of the Indochina conflict including that of our prisoners

Abshire, in a postcript, expressed regret "that we cannot concur with your request" realizing "the diligent and extremely capable efforts of the professional staff" in preparing the report.

The reference in the suppressed report to "halfhearted search for peace" is understood to refer to efforts on both sides of the bargaining. American and South Vietnamese on one side, and North Vietnamese and Vietcong on the other. Published portions of the Pentagon Papers have shown that the allied side often was reluctant to have its search for negotiations succeed when the allied military position was weak. The uncleared report presumably also deals with Communist reluctance to negotiate.